1. I. Robert Hogg or Hoge, born November 1721, a native of South Scotland, emigrated in early life to County Down, Province of Ulster, Ireland. He came to America in 1752. In the spring of 1754 he located on a tract of land in the Tuscarora Valley, then in Cumberland County, Province of Pennsylvania. In June 1756, owing to the Indian incursions upon the Juniata, Mr. Hoge fled with his little family to Carlisle, returning only in the fall of that year. On two other occasions did this early pioneer seek safety in the then principal place of refuge west of the Susquehanna. He died on his plantation the 25th of January, 1798, aged eighty years. His wife Letitia _____, born June 1724 in the north of Ireland; d. March 8, 1812, in Juniata County, Penn. and with her husband buried in what is now known as the "McKee graveyard." They had issue:—

Note by Leonard Lytle. I visited the McKee Graveyard in July, 1921, and found it overgrown with vines and bushes. The stones are in fair condition. I set down the following inscriptions. One or two graves appeared to be marked with field stones. There was one fragment of a red grave stone but I could not make out the words.

studied medicine and graduated in 1852 from U. of Pa. Was appointed resident physician St. Joseph's Hospital, Phil., but owing to impaired health resigned, and went to the Alleghenies.
In 1853 when the Penn. R.R. was being constructed he located at Altoona, and in 1856 went to Hollidaysburg. He shortly after made application and passed the Medical Army Board, and was commissioned an Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A. in August 1857.
Was ordered to Fort Union, New Mexico, where he served in three Indian campaigns, two against the Navajoes, and one against the Apaches, as well as scouting on the vast territory between Fort Massachusetts, Colorado to Fort Buchanan on the border of Sonora, until April 1861. In July he was with the U. S. troops under command of Major Lynde, 7th U. S. Inf. at Fort Fillmore who surrendered his force to the Rebels, so indignant was Major McKee at this disgraceful affair that he subsequently published a "Narrative of the Surrender of a Command of U.S. Forces at Fort Willmore, New Mexico." Paroled with the Command he returned to Fort Leavenworth and subsequently ordered to Camp Butler, Springfield, Ill., as a prisoner of war on parole, which he reached in April, 1862. APPENDIX

(Additions and corrections to Robert Hogg Manuscript made by Leonard Lytle, 2433 Elmhurst, Detroit, Mich., August, 1946.)

NOTES CONTRIBUTED BY MISS JESSICA FERGUSON OF HARRISBURG, PA.

Egles' History of Dauphin Co., Pa. p. 16, gives a list of Scotch Irish signing a petition to Governor of New England Colony for permission to settle there. Being refused they came to Pennsylvania and settled chiefly around Donegal. Robert and James Hogg were signers.

Robert Hogg was appointed Overseer of Poor, Milford Township, March 26, 1770 by Court at Carlisle before Jonathan Hoge, Esq. Reappointed March 25, 1771. See Quarter Sessions book 3-4, p. 82 and 127.

On March 25, 1775 Robert Hogg was appointed Constable for Milford Township. See Quarter Sessions Book 3-4.

See History of the Susquehanna and Juniata Valleys, Vol. 2, for numerous mentions of Hogg, Lytle, McKees and others. See especially pages 123, 501, 647, 729, 756, 780, 796, 800, 821 and 833. Also see History of Shenandoah Valley, and the Scotch Irish by Hanna, Vol. 1, p. 457, Vol. 2, p/ 419 "Hogg does not mean a pig or sow but a lamb a year old."

~~On 7/17/63~~ A copy of the Warrant for the Robert Hogg land obtained from the State Land Office at Harrisburg is dated April 11, 1763. On the margin is written "The land for which this warrant is granted having been settled upwards of eight years ago. Interest and Quit Rent is to commence from 1st. of March, 1755."

In 1922 I visited Mr. Jm. Graham of Spruce hill, Juniata Co., Pa. He said he was not related to Hamilton Graham but knew George McCullough was a Revolutionary soldier and that he was buried in an unmarked grave beside his wife Sarah in the McKee Cemetery. Mr. Graham and other patriotic citizens had made a practice of placing a flag on the McCullough grave on Decoration Day for many years past.

Mr. C. T. McCoy, Lancaster, Ohio, wrote me that he had a book ready to publish (in 1925) covering the direct descendants of Moses Sturgeon, who married Anna McCullough (See page 2 of Robert Hogg manuscript). He says that Mrs. Margaret Townsley made a large collection of the Sturgegon history and that she sent this to Dr. Egle who arranged it. After Dr. Egle's death this material was purchased from his daughter by a Sturgeon descendant. Mrs. Townsley died in Chicago, June 1915. Moses Sturgeon died May 7, 1850.

A CORRECTION: to statement in manuscript that John Lytle married a daughter of John Hite. This statement has caused me a great deal of trouble. Mrs. Townsley accepted it as correct and I have found it re-stated in other places. Relying on this I at one time sent out some charts showing the original ancestor of my Lytle line to be John Lytle, married to Rachel, a cousin of President James Buchanan.

If the last lines of the history statement are made to read as follows they will express the facts as proven by me after a thorough search. "Mary Lyon, one of Hite's step-daughters was the third wife of John Lytle, Jr. who ran the ferry at Mifflintown and who afterward moved to Hollidaysburg. He was a brother of Robert of Alexandria and Hollidaysburg, of James who moved to Ohio and of David who moved to Waterloo, N. Y.

In 1939 I learned through Miss Henrietta Baldwin of Mifflintown, Pa. that the county had put a stone marker on George McCullough's grave.

Vol. 2, pl 419 "Hog," does not mean a pig or sow but a lamb a year old.

See "History of Shenandoah Valley" for Hogg data. Mr. Jeffry J. Taylor, Greensburg, Pa. is interested in the Mc Bride family.

DATA CONTRIBUTED BY REV. CHARLES H. MEFF, TENNENT, N. J.

"In a history of Huntingdon Presbytery it is stated that Robert Hoge and two other men were the first white men to cross the mountain into Tuscarora Valley. There was a William Hoge who came to New Jersey with a group of Scottish exiles about 1685. He served on the Grand Jury in this county in 1700 and later went to Virginia. He had a son the Rev. John Hoge who preached in Virginia and after 1762 in Pennsylvania and was well-known. Then there was a Moses Hoge, born 1752-died 1817, one of the early Presidents of Hamden Sidney College in Virginia."

The story of Robert Hogg as published in the History of the Susquehanna and Juniata Valleys, Vol. 1, pages, 796-797. (This History published 1886)

"Robert Hogg, claimed by some writers to be one of the first settlers, had a large tract of three hundred and ninety-three acres warranted April 11, 1763. It is choice land, and is now held by John L. Patterson, George Patterson, William Patterson, Christ Yoder, James Fitzgerald, the latter's mill being on the tract.

"Robert Hogg's daughter, Mary, was married, September 15, 1778, by Rev. Hugh Magill, to John McKee, and they occupied part of the mansion tract. Their children were Robert, Thomas, William, Mary, James, John, Martha, David, Logan and Sarah.

They all left Tuscarora Valley except William, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Laird, in 1816. Mrs. Samuel Cooper, of Port Royal, and Mrs. M. Forsyth, of Derry, Mifflin County, are daughters. John McKee laid out on his land a lot for a church and grave-yard. No church was ever built here; but the ground was used for a grave-yard, and here Robert Hogg and wife, Letitia, John McKee and others are buried. It is known as "McKee's graveyard," and is on the farm now Christ Yoder's. Here, therefore, repose the remains of one of the pioneer adventurers into Tuscarora. There is a story that, at the time of the taking of Bigham's Fort, Mrs. McKee and her father (Robert Hogg) were taking some goods across the mountain on a cow, and were seen by the Indians, who let them pass, because they did not wish just then to alarm the fort.

"Although William MacLay surveyed and returned for Hogg three hundred and ninety-three acres under his warrant, yet this was more than could be held under it. One John Kennedy thought he would like to lay a warrant on the surplus. Hogg entered his caveat and they were cited to appear July 28, 1765. Kennedy not appearing, Hogg was heard. The decision was, "That Hogg made an improvement on the place in dispute long before Kennedy obtained any warrant for the same, and was driven off by the Indians; therefore Hogg is to have three hundred and ninety-three acres, provided he take out a new warrant for one hundred and fifty acres, but this must not interfere with John Gray." Hogg sold the benefit of this grant to John McKee June 7, 1786, who warranted one hundred and fifty-one acres inside of Hogg's old lines. The time Hogg was driven off by Indians must refer to 1756, when Bigham's Fort was taken. The reader will note the special tender regard for Hannah, widow of John Gray, that the lines of her survey remained unchanged, and that she be not troubled with any interferences.

"The name of this old pioneer was spelled Hogg in former days. He came from East Pennsborough, in Cumberland County, where numbers of the family spell their name Hoge. Jonathan Hoge was long active and useful in the early days of this State. The tombstones say Robert Hoge died January 20, 1798, aged eighty years. Letitia Hoge died March 12, 1812, aged eighty-eight years. John McKee died November 10, 1830, aged seventy-six years. His wife, "old Mrs. McKee," of the famous law-suit, and only daughter of Robert Hoge, died in the West. There is an old path here, crossing the mountain, which was known as Hogg's, and later, McKee's Gap, though there is no depression in the mountain."

Leonard Lytle has an extensive collection of data on his own family. He has also collected much information on some 22 Lytle families not known to be related.

In the History of the Susquehanna and Juniata Valleys there are many references to the Hoggs, Lytles, McKees and others. I give, herewith, my index to the 1st Volume there being no mentions that I can find in the 2nd Volume.
